Dear Mr Sheppard,

Thank you for your letter dated 27th June.

In the first instance I am not quite sure what, if anything, you are asking of me upon reading the contents of your letter. It does appear to me that you may be contesting the Will of your late father although your letter does not indicate this.

The only information that I can give you is with regards to the appointment that I had with Mrs M Sheppard on 21st February 2007.

I am a Fellow of the Institute of Legal Executives and as such am able to administer oaths and witness documents. The appointment that I had with Mrs Sheppard on 21st February 2007 was simply for me to witness two documents that Mrs Sheppard brought to me. It is not my position that I advise upon the contents of any documents that are placed before me, but simply to enquire from the client that I am attending upon as to whether the contents of the documents are true, that the names and addresses contained within any such documents are correct, whether there are any other typographical errors or amendments that need a signature against and assuming that all is in order, I simply attend upon clients whilst the documents are either sworn on oath or witnessed by me. That is the only extent to which I attended upon Mrs Sheppard.

I was not responsible for the preparation of any statements put before me and therefore I cannot say whether they were grossly inaccurate as outlined in your letter.
